Andromeda

SSATB

Andromeda of the Borealis and the shooting stars that live inside will one day collide with the Milky Way, a galaxy redefined.

*Those stars will gleam for 4 billion more years
despite impending doom,
and recognize the glow they give,
as light in darkness blooms.*

Glossary

Andromeda (pictured below): a spiral galaxy approximately 2.5 million light years from Earth. It is made up of about 1 trillion stars. Expected to collide with the Milky Way in 4 billion years to form a giant elliptical galaxy (a large disc galaxy). It is named after the constellation found in the Northern Hemisphere of the Earth's sky.

Stars: Stars are astronomical objects consisting of a luminous spheroid of matter held together by its own gravity.

Borealis: Meaning "North"

Milky Way (pictured left): the galaxy containing our Solar System. Made of 200-400 billion stars and 100 billion planets.

Galaxy: a gravitationally bound system of stars and other interstellar elements (gas, remnants and dark matter). It is said that there are 2 trillion or more galaxies, containing more stars than all the grains of sand on planet Earth. Most galaxies are 3000 to 300,000 light years in diameter and are either elliptical, spiral or irregular in shape.

Performance Note ** In Bar 43: Singer chooses their own personal "Star" note: their most comfortable and strongest higher-register note, in the key, shining in the face of doom.
